

There is no need to rescind the requirement of mobile providers to allow consumers to retain their phone numbers when changing plans. The cost to the provider is small compared to the cost to business for stationery and record changes, not to mention the inconvenience to the individual user. DON'T CHANGE IT!